

New Products to Change Our Lives: Spotlight on the HomeMed™ Monitor

People who struggle with chronic disease and other health conditions have many different and complex needs, as do their family members. Meeting these needs is one of the biggest challenges facing the health care industry today.

Chronically ill patients require planned, regular interaction with their caregivers, focusing on prevention and intervention. These interactions support the patient's role as a self-manager and are integral to the patient's health maintenance.

One southern Utah home care company, Horizon Home Health, has added the latest in home monitoring equipment to their standard patient care to help meet the challenges of keeping a lid on healthcare costs while still providing better patient outcomes.

The HomeMed™ System empowers people who suffer from chronic illnesses or other health conditions to take an active role in their own health management. At the same time, the home monitoring system offers these people and their families the comfort and security of knowing that "someone is watching over them" every day.

Doctors receive daily information regarding a patient's vital signs and can treat any situations that arise accordingly, often mitigating problems that would, if gone unnoticed, require an emergency room visit.
